The Uncomfortable Truth

One hard admission, then 3 quiet minutes before anyone repairs it.

1. Say your pause phrase. Choose who speaks first. The second turn gets the same clock.
2. A quiet minute, then one difficult admission. If the listener speaks, the only line is, "I'm taking this in."
3. When you stop, start 3 minutes. No fix, bright side, cross-examination, or matching confession. If the quiet feels like a wall, repeat that sentence only.
4. Ask for one short reply and name the kind: what you heard, one question, or an idea. Or end the turn. Then swap.

One truth each, under this rule, finishes the standard sitting.

Do not build a case against your partner. Ongoing harm, abuse, or a safety problem stops this frame. Ordinary responsibility resumes.

A pass or a smaller admission is a finished turn. The pause phrase can stop you or send you to an easier truth.
